Coaching for peak sales performance

Equip your sales managers and coaches with the skills and strategies they need to make a positive difference and guide their sales professionals to superior sales performance.

Research shows that one of the most critical roles a sales manager plays is in the coaching of the sales team. Even though most sales managers would support this assertion, few would claim they are able to devote enough time to the practice.

Sales coaching is the most direct way to impact sales team performance.

Professional Sales Coaching™ provides your sales managers and coaches with the framework, communication skills, and planning tools they need to build and maintain a superior sales team—one that generates mutually beneficial, long-term business relationships. They learn how:

- To demonstrate The Basic Principles to increase coaching effectiveness with their sales teams.
- To evaluate sales performance using the Coaching Issues Diagram.
- To apply a set of skill steps for providing constructive feedback, developing others, and giving recognition to increase salesperson performance and drive results.

Module Highlights & Outcomes

The workshop consists of four units, each geared toward building a comprehensive understanding of what it takes to be successful as a sales coach.

Why Coach

Participants explore what coaching means, why it's important, and what makes coaching challenging. Specifically, participants discuss:

- The challenges and rewards of improving business results by changing others' behavior.
- Three aspects for creating a high-performance sales climate in their teams.
- Advantages and disadvantages of directive and collaborative approaches to coaching.
- How to apply The Basic Principles to establish a culture of collaboration within the sales team.

What to Coach

This unit focuses on the issues and competencies that outline superior sales performance, and can be used in observing and evaluating sales team performance. Participants learn:

- To utilize three areas of sales call competence—product knowledge, customer knowledge, and selling skills/sales process—to evaluate individual and team behaviors.
- To coach to a standard using customizable assessment and evaluation tools.
- To focus their efforts on common performance improvement issues.
- To utilize a manager's Resource Guide to identify positive and negative cues associated with keys to selling success.

How to Coach

In this unit, sales managers acquire, develop, and apply the skill steps for conducting coaching conversations in a variety of situations. For example, participants learn:

- To set the stage for the coaching conversation and action-planning process.
- To utilize specific communications skills critical to sharing insights and observations with a salesperson.
- To value gaining a salesperson's buy-in—not just compliance—to coaching recommendations.
- To leverage selling skills within a coaching conversation.
- To conduct three kinds of coaching conversations: constructive feedback, development, and recognition.
- To handle difficult coaching conversations in which the salesperson is resistant.
- To coach from a distance (when the sales manager does not have the opportunity for face-to-face coaching conversations) with specific processes, tips, and techniques.

When to Coach

The final unit within the program revolves around actionable coaching. Coaches review steps for coaching observations, implementing a broad-scale coaching process with their team, and are provided experience with tools for reinforcing sales skills. Specifically, participants learn:

- To conduct a coaching kick-off in order to institute formal coaching as an ongoing process.
- To build long-term developmental action plans for each individual on their sales teams.
- To set action plans in motion and track their people's progress.
- To observe sales calls in order to promote focused coaching.
- To leverage reinforcement tools to support better use of core selling skills.
