

Professional Selling Skills®

Top sales professionals know that their success is predicated on their customers. That focusing on the customers' success is the only sure path to long term sales success. Today, customers are busier, and under more pressure to make good, cost-effective buying decisions. They are overwhelmed with information but have little time to decipher it. And, there is less tolerance for decisions that do not deliver the right results.

Professional Selling Skills® reflects the skills used by world-class sales professionals to help customers succeed, by understanding their needs and consistently developing solutions that deliver results.

A research-based program, Professional Selling Skills® teaches customer interaction skills that enable participants to lead mutually beneficial sales conversations with customers—even those who are indifferent or express concerns.

Reinforcement and Coaching Components Support Sales Success

Building on the selling skills and strategies that have benefited more than 3 million sales professionals around the world, the Professional Selling Skills® 2-day classroom experience is supported by components to ensure mastery of the skills.

Professional Selling Skills® includes easy-to-use online reinforcement tools and a coaching component for sales managers to help participants effectively and consistently apply the skills that improve sales performance.

Research Based Content Drives Expertise

Professional Selling Skills® is based on extensive and ongoing research into the skills salespeople need to excel in their increasingly challenging and complex role. A recent MHI Research Institute study highlighted the critical role that the skills in this program play in developing world-class salespeople – those who excel at quota achievement, new business development, and growth of existing accounts.

Program Highlights and Outcomes

In the program, salespeople develop the face-to-face selling skills needed to promote an open exchange of information and reach mutually beneficial sales agreements.

In the Collaborative Techniques section, participants learn conversational skills to engage customers, develop rapport and improve listening.

This section helps participants to:

- listen effectively and demonstrate to customers that they are listening
- acknowledge the customer's thoughts throughout the sales call to show respect and empathy
- use transitioning skills to set context and position questions and topics
- confirm understanding and demonstrate interest
- ensure they and the customer are aligned by frequently "checking" with the customer

In the Open section, participants learn how to effectively open calls in a customer-focused manner.

This section helps participants to:

- work with customers to define what will be covered or accomplished during the call
- identify mutually beneficial customer commitments and use them to plan future interactions
- build rapport at the beginning of a sales call and move smoothly from rapport building to the business discussion
- encourage customers to express concerns and hesitations directly; address the resistance and get the customer to agree to continue the conversation

In the Discover section, participants learn how to use effective questions to gather information and build a clear, complete, mutual understanding of a customer's needs.

This section helps participants to:

- facilitate an open exchange of information
- uncover the circumstances driving the customer's need, as well as the need behind the need
- use confirming questions to ensure understanding and build trust
- strike a balance between open and closed probes

In the Resolve Indifference section, participants will learn to create awareness of unrealized needs with customers who express indifference.

This section helps participants to:

- use a four-step discover strategy to identify opportunities and confirm needs
- recognize when it makes sense to discontinue a sales process due to legitimate indifference from the customer

In the Satisfy section, participants will examine how to provide information that helps the customer make an informed buying decision.

This section helps participants to:

- explore the best time—and the most powerful and persuasive way—to talk about their offering and organization
- describe how relevant features will benefit the customer, based on the customer's specific needs
- acknowledge each need accurately before introducing features and benefits
- be aware of the sometimes negative consequences of introducing their offering prematurely

In the Resolve Concerns section, participants will learn to recognize, differentiate between, and resolve the three main types of customer concerns: skepticism, misunderstandings, and drawbacks.

This section helps participants to:

- ask useful questions to understand a customer's concern before addressing it
- overcome a customer's skepticism by offering relevant proof
- clear up misunderstandings by providing accurate information
- overcome drawbacks by emphasizing benefits relevant to the customer

In the Close section, participants learn to recognize when a customer is prepared to move ahead in the sales cycle.

This section helps participants to:

- skillfully apply a three-step process for securing customer commitment
- focus on attaining the best reasonable commitment based on what has transpired during the sales call

Professional Selling Skills® incorporates a guided discovery learning design that involves a range of activities geared toward effective adult learning.

Activities include:

- review and discussion of key concepts to acquire skills
- audio models that illustrate the use of the critical sales call skills
- extensive use of a practical tool, the Sales Call Planner, to help prepare the call strategy
- sessions in which participants practice and evaluate skills in complete sales conversations
- fun and competitive team challenges to further understanding of skills
- small group and team exercises to hone skill use and understanding
- technology-enabled interactive activities, to enhance the learning experience
